

Five Driving Reasons Your Portable Campus Should be Done with Excellence:

1.

Acknowledge the Options:

It is mission critical to acknowledge that everything in ministry can be done really well (with EXCELLENCE) or really poorly (“this will do for now”) including a new launch in a rented facility!

2.

Create an Environment Equal to the Vision/Mission:

By launching a portable campus with excellence, your lead team, sending congregation members, and lost people in the community, will have the utmost confidence in resourcing the vision and mission, and that the church decision-makers believe in the newly launched community.

3.

Create Enormous Confidence:

There is only one chance to make a great first impression! Those on your launch team will likely return to the sending campus if the new environment doesn't show signs of the excellence they just left behind when they were commissioned. Lost people in the community experience great environments every day and their first or newest exposure to The Church should not disappoint them - even in a portable environment.

4.

Gain Trust from Street to Seat:

Lost people in the community must be convinced that what is communicated to them in your environment is trustworthy and good. As they journey through your new launch, from street to seat, it must make them feel comfortable and open. When they finally sit down to hear the Gospel, they can't be distracted about what they just walked through, or where they just left their children.

5.

You Might Not Know What You Might Not Know, But that Shouldn't be a Roadblock:

For most churches, designing and building a portable system that provides an excellent environment for communicating the Gospel is simply a distraction. The team's skill sets are likely not built for such a specific task. There are many resources outside of the church that are called on to provide excellence in the work. Going portable with Excellence should be one of them.
